

"Self Denial"

by Brian Shrock

Responsibilities rise and expectations grow
As small victories are won and minor goals achieved,
But the thought that this could continue, you know is something that just can't be believed.

When the spotlight of responsibility begins to turn your way,
The frantic fear of failure frolics in your distress,
And you flee to safety in the comfort of your misery,
As self-sabotage denies your own success.

©~1998 by Brian D. Shrock, All rights reserved.